The Company's Approach to Tax Risk

The Company ensures that all transactions are supported by commercial substance and the Company will not implement planning that it believes could jeopardise its reputation. There is no prescriptive level or pre-defined limit to the amount of acceptable tax risk. The Company assesses the level of acceptable tax risk on a case by case basis, including scale, complexity, reputational risk, corporate responsibility obligations and the impact on its shareholders. Where uncertainty exists, the Company will either seek external advice or engage directly with the tax authorities in order to ensure that it is compliant with the relevant tax laws and regulations.

The approach to tax compliance is consistent with the Company's appetite for managing its operational risk to as low a level as is commercially sensible, taking account of both the financial impact and the value placed by the Company on maintaining a reputation for upholding the highest standards of corporate ethics.

The Company's Approach to Working with Tax Authorities

The Company seeks to minimise the risk of a dispute with taxing authorities by being open and transparent about its tax affairs. Furthermore, the tax consequences of significant commercial transactions are considered by the Board as part of its deliberations on the transactions in question.

The Company seeks to maintain an open, transparent and collaborative relationship with tax authorities. The Company aims to provide information requested by tax authorities on a timely basis and will engage in discussions regarding complex, technical positions prior to the submission of tax returns where appropriate. The Company is committed to ensuring faultless compliance; however, should an error come to light, the Company expects to report proactively this to the relevant tax authority.
